

STATEMENT OF HOME TIES TO BANGLADESH

Date: February 05, 2026

Applicant: MD ASADUJJMAN

My name is MD ASADUJJMAN. I live in Dhaka, Bangladesh, with my beloved family. My father is ABDUL KADER BAPARI. My mother is HASSIA BEGUM. They are the foundation of my life. My parents are getting older. They rely on me for their care and support. I have deep love and respect for them both. Our family home is in a quiet neighborhood in Dhaka. It is where I grew up. My own children are growing up in this same house. This home is very important to all of us. It holds many cherished memories for our family.

I am a dedicated husband and father. My wife, Fahmida Begum, and our two young children are the center of my world. My son, Rahman, is eight years old. My daughter, Mariam, is five years old. They are still very young. They need my constant presence, guidance, and support every day. My wife manages our household with great care. She depends greatly on my income and decisions for our family's well-being. Our children are enrolled in local schools here in Dhaka. Their education is a top priority for me. I am very involved in their school life. I spend quality time with them every day after work. My family is my biggest responsibility and my greatest joy. My entire social and emotional life is centered around them. They are my reason for working hard and for my future plans. I cherish every moment spent with my family here. I am deeply committed to their future in Bangladesh.

I am the owner and manager of ABRAR TRADING. This is a successful supply business based in Dhaka. I started ABRAR TRADING about ten years ago. I built it from the ground up. My business focuses on supplying various goods to local shops and businesses. We handle everything from sourcing products to managing logistics and delivery. As the owner, I oversee all operations. My role is crucial for daily functioning. I secure new contracts. I also manage client relationships. This requires my constant presence and decision-making for every important step.

Every day, my work involves many key tasks. I meet with suppliers to negotiate prices and terms. I ensure we get quality products at competitive rates. I also manage our team of employees, including drivers and warehouse staff. I supervise inventory. I make sure our deliveries are always on time and efficient. I am in charge of all financial aspects. This includes budgeting and strategic investments for growth. My direct involvement is essential for ABRAR TRADING to operate smoothly and profitably. I have ambitious plans for its future. We are exploring new market opportunities. I am also working on modernizing our logistics system. These projects demand my personal attention and leadership. Without me, the business would face serious difficulties and financial loss.

I have significant property and financial assets in Bangladesh. These represent years of hard work. They firmly anchor me to my home country. I own our family home in Dhaka, registered in my name. It is where my family lives. This house provides stability for my family. Owning this home gives me a strong sense of belonging and responsibility. I am also the sole owner of a commercial property. This property houses the main office and warehouse for ABRAR TRADING. It is a vital asset for my business operations and future.

Beyond real estate, I have substantial financial ties. I maintain several active bank accounts in Bangladesh. These include personal savings and business accounts. They hold significant funds. These funds are necessary for managing my daily expenses and business transactions. I also have various investments in local financial institutions. These investments are part of my long-term financial planning. They aim to secure my family's future and grow my business. I also manage my children's education funds for their schooling and future studies here in Bangladesh.

These properties and financial assets require my constant management. My presence is needed for my family home's upkeep. It is essential for ABRAR TRADING's commercial property operations. I handle all financial decisions and transactions myself. I monitor my investments regularly. These responsibilities cannot be delegated easily. They are too important to leave unattended for long. My entire financial well-being and that of my family are tied to these assets. They are a powerful reason why I must return to Bangladesh after my travels.

My life in Bangladesh is deeply enriched by strong cultural and social ties. These connections go beyond family and business. They are an integral part of who I am. I grew up here. I am proud of my Bangladeshi heritage. I actively participate in local traditions and festivals. Eid al-Fitr and Eid al-Adha are important. These festivals bring our community together. We celebrate with family, friends, and neighbors. These cultural events strengthen my bond with my community. They remind me of my roots and identity.

I am also deeply connected to my local community in Dhaka. I regularly attend the local mosque. This is for prayer and community gatherings. I have many close friends and extended family members living nearby. We share strong bonds of friendship and mutual support. I am part of various social circles, including business associates and childhood friends. We meet regularly for social interaction and discussions. I often contribute to local charitable initiatives. I believe in giving back to the society that has supported me.

Bangladesh is more than just a place I live; it is my true home. The vibrant culture, familiar customs, and warmth of my people make it so. My social network is here. My sense of belonging is deeply rooted in this country. All my significant life experiences, from childhood to starting my family and business, have happened here. These cultural and social ties are irreplaceable. They form a crucial part of my identity. They are another strong reason why I am committed to returning to Bangladesh after my travels.

In conclusion, my ties to Bangladesh are strong and unbreakable. They encompass every aspect of my life. My family depends entirely on me. My wife, Fahmida Begum, and our two young children, Rahman and Mariam, need my constant presence and support. My elderly parents rely on me for their care. Leaving them for an extended time is not an option. My deep commitment to my family is the most important reason for my certain return to Bangladesh.

Furthermore, my business, ABRAR TRADING, demands my leadership. As the owner and manager, I am crucial to its daily operations and future growth. I have invested heavily in this company. My absence would cause significant harm and disruption. My property and financial assets also tie me firmly to Bangladesh. I own my family home and the commercial property for my business. I manage multiple bank accounts and investments. These assets require my direct oversight.

Finally, my strong cultural and social connections keep me rooted here. I am an active member of my community. I participate in local traditions and religious events. My network of friends and extended family is entirely in Bangladesh. These ties represent my identity and my sense of belonging. My entire life, past, present, and future plans are centered in Bangladesh. I am committed to my family, my business, my assets, and my community. I promise to return to Bangladesh promptly after my visit. My intention is solely to travel and then resume my responsibilities and life in my home country.
